4000 SOLDIERS ARRIVE IN CAMP

Pennsylvania and New Jersey Militia Arrive in Camp of Instruction for Work of Second Period. Make Fine Appearance.

Almost four thousand National Guards from Pennsylvania and New Jersey arrived in the big maneuver camp east of town on Sunday and the place is again busy with soldiers doing their daily rounds and undergoing instruction at the hands of the regulars here for the entire month. The commands which came in on Sunday were the following:

Pennsylvania: Ninth, Twelfth and Thirteenth infantry; First and Second City Troops and Troop A cavalry; Battery B artillery.

New Jersey: Second and Third regiments infantry; Battery B artillery.

It required over twenty trains to bring all of the troops here, all but four of which came over the Western Maryland. The trains were handled with great skill and dispatch by the Western Maryland authorities and the troops were rapidly detrained after their arrival here, so that all got into camp in good time.

The New Jersey troops started to arrive at two o'clock Sunday morning and by eight o'clock had their camp well established. The Pennsylvania cavalry started to come in about one in the afternoon and the last of the Keystone State boys arrived about six o'clock.

The new militia in camp meet the approval of the regulars who were heard making many favorable comments as the Pennsylvanians marched up the hill.

"They look something like the real thing" one of Uncle Sam's soldiers was heard to remark.

"Not like that bunch of Virginia mountaineers" added another.

The regulars even went so far as to applaud some of the Pennsylvania troops and the boys were welcomed as they reached the big camp.

NEWS FOR HUNTERS

Two years ago Dr. Kalbfus, of Harrisburg, planted two wild turkey hens in what is known as "The Big Flat."

At that time there was one wild turkey gobbler in the vicinity, and he had been seen by a number of people. The birds were unmolested and they have multiplied to such an extent that recently a flock of six big wild turkeys was seen in the game preserve at Mont Alto, Franklin County, about fifteen miles distant and there are indications that there will be more.

"The Big Flat" will be a favorite hunting spot next fall.

ACCIDENT IN CLOUD OF DUST

Leslie Oyler Has Buggy badly Damaged when it Collides with Team of William Hemler during Severe Wind and Rain Storm.

The deep dust on the York pike, swirled into a dense cloud by the sudden gust of wind which swept over this section Sunday evening, was the cause of a driving accident which threatened to result seriously.

Two teams, the one driven by William Hemler and the other by Lester Oyler, collided in the cloud of dust, near the Hunterstown road crossing of the Western Maryland railroad, and the vehicle in which Mr. Oyler was driving was badly damaged. Neither driver could see the other and the accident happened before the presence of the other team was realized.

Mr. Oyler jumped from the buggy and ran to his horse's head while Mr. Hemler had no difficulty in stopping his own team. One wheel of the Oyler buggy was broken and the axle was badly bent.

The occupants of Mr. Hemler's team were unhurt and his wagon was not damaged. Mr. Oyler had a friend with him and both remained in the buggy until he got out to control the horse.

FRUIT GROWERS DISCUSS PEACHES

Adams County Fruit Growers Hold Regular Meeting at Bendersville and Talk over Proper Method of Handling Peach Crop.

At the seventy seventh meeting of the Fruit Growers' Association of Adams County held in Fruit Growers' Hall, Bendersville, on Saturday evening the topic for discussion was "The Handling of the Peach Crop."

The matter of thinning was taken up by George Oyler, of Gettysburg R. D. 5. Mr. Oyler said that his experience had shown that it is absolutely necessary both from the standpoint of fine fruit and the subsequent health of the tree to remove such amount of fruit as will enable the trees to properly mature the balance without affecting the vitality of the tree.

W. S. Adams, of Aspers, talked on "Packages." In the general discussion which followed Mr. Adams' talk, it was the consensus of opinion that it is not worth while to pack anything but the very finest fruit in carriers and that, for local markets, the half bushel peach basket is preferred for all grades.

Levi M. Myers, of near Dillsburg, a successful York County peach grower, presented the question of "Picking, Grading and Packing."

Mr. Myers emphasized the importance of exercising great care to pick the fruit at the proper time. In most cases two or three pickings are required. The fruit is sorted from two to four grades, depending on the market to which it is to be sent. The packing is done by expert packers always under shelter, each package being decorated under the cover with a few sprigs of healthy leaves.

J. W. Prickett, of Biglerville R. D., discussed the question of markets.

The question of transportation was discussed at some length and arrangements made for a subsequent meeting of peach growers in the near future to confer with transportation companies with a view to securing better transportation facilities so as to insure the prompt arrival at the destination, under refrigeration if possible.

WHEAT CROP

Official reports from the grain producing sections of the Northwest do not indicate that the entire wheat crop has suffered the damage previously reported. In isolated districts some of which are of considerable size, the crop has already suffered such damage as to reduce the probable yield to 40 per cent. of last year's crop.

Over the Northwest generally there is admitted damage, but the careful inspection trips of two railway general managers and a score of wheat experts during the past 10 days indicate that to predict half a crop is to credit all the damage reports which have come in.

BLIGHT ATTACKS POTATOES

This year in many potato patches throughout Franklin county, the vines turned yellow and began to dry up about the time they began to bloom. While at this time there were some potatoes on the vines, yet as a result the growth was stopped and as a consequence there was a great falling off in the yield. This has been noticed in whole and parts of patches in many places and notwithstanding the excellent potato season in this section this year there will be a comparatively light yield.

BLOOD POISONING

Nathaniel Funk, of the State forest academy, Mont Alto, carries his right hand in a bandage and is unable to use it as the result of a severe case of blood poisoning. The blood poisoning came from a mosquito bite that he received about two weeks ago. He thought nothing of the incision in his flesh, however, until his hand began to pain him and swelled up to large proportions. The swelling is now rapidly going down, but he is still unable to do any work with the afflicted hand.

RAIN AND WIND STORM SUNDAY

Hurried Rush for Shelter when Lively Wind and Rain Storm Sweeps down on Gettysburg and Soldiers' Camp.

A wind and rain storm of exceptional severity swept over Gettysburg and certain sections of Adams County Sunday evening and laid the dust, helped crops and freshened things up generally. While the rain was heavy here there were a number of places nearby where practically none at all fell. At Round Top it was very light and other places only a mile or two from town report merely a light sprinkle.

The storm came at a time when there were a number of people on the streets and there was a hurried rush for cover. A terrific windstorm accompanied the rain and for about ten minutes things were decidedly unpleasant out of doors and the streets were deserted.

The rain came at an inopportune time for the soldiers who arrived at camp during the day, many of whom had not yet gotten their canvas in position and they were well soaked. They took refuge in the tents of others who were more fortunate and it was not until this morning that things were really straightened out.

A short but severe electrical storm accompanied the rain and wind but did no damage of any consequence.

WHITE RUN

White Run, July 11.—Grace Sunday School, Two Taverns, will hold their celebration and festival Saturday afternoon and evening, August 6.

Miss Estella Sentz, of this place, is spending several weeks with the family of her brother, William Sentz, of White Hall.

Albert Solt, a National Guard from Williamsport, who with his wife, has been visiting the family of Jacob Clapp, went into camp at Gettysburg on Sunday along with the others of his regiment.

The farmers have nearly all finished hauling grain and making hay and some are threshing while others are cutting oats.

Ervin L. Bucher spent the Fourth with his grandparents of Alloways.

Milton Benner and wife spent Sunday at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mehning, of Littlestown.

Thursday was a lively day in this place. The soldiers from Gettysburg had a sham battle and they made so much noise that several women were frightened. One man was helping a neighbor to haul hay and when he heard that soldiers were in the neighborhood he ran for home and in his rush forgot that he had carried his neighbor's fork along until after his fright was over and his wife asked what he wanted with the fork. Then he answered, "Oh! I thought you would be afraid of the soldiers." In another case a woman went to the home of a neighbor for some apples. When she heard the soldiers coming she picked up a basket of apples that the neighbor had picked for herself and emptied them into her apron and started for home at a rapid rate.

A good many people from this place have visited camp at Gettysburg.

St. Mark's Sunday School will hold its festival the last Saturday in this month, July 30.

SUMMIT SEASON

Blue Ridge Summit is now nearly at the height of its season, and many cottages that were vacant last year are being occupied this year. The summer population of the town is very large and the cottagers present include many prominent citizens of Hagerstown, Baltimore and Washington.

Motion pictures are shown at the parish house several evenings each week, bridge parties are held at the country club each Monday and Thursday many golf players make use of the fine level links at the club house grounds and the fiction library at Monterey is growing popular every day.

STORE STRUCK

Biglerville, July 11.—During the thunderstorm which visited this place about 6:30 Sunday evening the hardware store of S. Gray Bigum was struck by lightning. The slate roof was damaged, a portion of the weather boarding of the building was torn out and other minor damage done. The bolt which was unusually severe went through some paper on the second floor of the building but did not ignite it. A number of people in the vicinity of the building were stunned.

AT the clearance sale the entire stock of lingerie, both white and colored, dresses, greatly reduced in price. All new since May 1st. G. W. Weaver and son.

DEATH OF WELL KNOWN MINISTER

National Guard Chaplain and Former Minister in Adams County Dies at his Home in Hanover. In Military Life Many Years.

Captain Daniel Eberly, for nearly thirty five years chaplain of the Eighth regiment, N. G. P., Col. Joseph B. Hutchinson commanding, died Saturday night at his home in Hanover, aged 71 years.

Captain Eberly was the oldest chaplain in point of service in one regiment in the National Guard. During the Civil War he served as a private in Company B, Fourth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, from June 27, 1863, to August 13, 1863. He was commissioned chaplain of the Eighth in September, 1875, and served the regiment faithfully during the thirty five years that have elapsed.

The deceased was a native of Cumberland county, having been born on a farm at Shiremanstown, where he labored until possessed with a desire for a broader culture. He prepared himself for college and later entered Otterbein University, Ohio, from which he was graduated with the degree of A. B. in 1858. He then undertook post graduate work at Brown university, Providence, Rhode Island, being a classmate of the late John Hay, ex-secretary of state.

Having prepared for the ministry he was admitted to the Pennsylvania conference of the United Brethren church and served congregations in York, Adams and Cumberland counties, being pastor of a Hanover church for several years. He was also called to the Scott street church, Baltimore, and a church in Lebanon.

From 1866 to 1873 he was president of the Cottage Hill female college, at York and served one year as president of his Alma Mater, Otterbein university, and was elected president of Lebanon Valley college, Annville, having been professor of the Latin language and literature in the latter institution for eight years. He did not accept this position owing to the death in 1884 of Mrs. Eberly who was Miss Josephine Bittinger, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Bittinger, of Abbotstown.

Dr. Eberly moved to Hanover in 1900 and resided there continuously since.

MISS LOLA M. COOK

Miss Lola M. Cook, died at her home near Bendersville Station this morning after an illness of four months due to ulceration of the stomach. Her age was 25 years, 3 months and 7 days.

She was the daughter of Ellis W. and Martha H. Cook, both deceased. She is survived by one sister, Eva, and two brothers, Melvin and Arthur, all at home. She taught school in the county for 4 terms, 3 years in Menallen and 2 in Hamilton township and was very successful.

Funeral will be held on Thursday, July 14. Services at the house at 9 a. m. Interment at the Friends' Cemetery at Flora Dale, Hiram Grist conducting the services.

WELLINGTON PRODUCTION

Jay Wellington is in town making arrangements for another production for the benefit of the Citizens' Band. The director was to return in September but owing to the fact that he will begin his season professionally the latter part of August he is obliged to make his final trip here before that time. He will put on a production of comedy acts, songs and dances, presenting his original act, "A New York Roof Garden by Night," with latest songs, attractive scenes and special light effects. "The Gettysburg Players" give a better show than many professional companies and it is expected that their final performance this year will eclipse any previous effort.

A South Arabian Food Plant.
Jowari, a tall, slender plant resembling corn and headed with a grain something like millet, is the Abdali's chief crop. He feeds the stalk to his camels and eats the grain himself. Three crops a year are produced. Jowari requires little cultivation except weeding, when the Abdali does by hand, and when ripe he cuts it off close to the ground with his hunting knife. New shoots spring up from the roots to become the next crop. For a camel load of about 120 pounds he receives at Aden an average of two rupees, or $64.58. A fair yearly yield is twenty camel loads an acre.—Consular and Trade Reports.

There is no one of the bird enemies of the cotton boll weevil that is given a higher rating in the destruction of this insect than the purple martin, which spends the winter in the northern states. More than this, it continues its work of insect destruction in the localities where it builds its nest and rears its young. For these reasons one is a real benefactor if he does what he can to provide secure nesting places for these interesting birds—helps himself and the cotton planter of the south. If along with the protection given the martin a like protection were accorded the robin during its winter sojourn in southern states there would be very real reciprocity of favors.

A Good Roads "Smoker."

Recently the Business Men's association of Larned, Kan., gave a good roads "smoker" which was attended by more than 300 citizens of the county. The enthusiasm developed insured a new era in the building and maintenance of good roads in this section of the short grass country. Such a meeting would have been impossible a few years ago because it was thought that the dirt roads of middle and western Kansas would never need any great amount of care. Increased population, however, has shown differently, and there are now no more enthusiastic sections of the state on the good roads proposition.

Desperate Characters Sing as They Bore Wall at Georgetown, Del., Jail. One Hurt and Is Caught.

Georgetown, Del., July 11.—Chiseling their way through a five-foot wall, five prisoners, four of them desperate characters waiting trial for various charges, including murder, made a sensational escape from the county jail here.

Making their way to the top of the wall surrounding the prison, the men, willing to risk life and limb to get away, leaped twenty-two feet to the street below. One of them was so badly injured that he was unable to regain his feet and was captured. The other four dashed wildly through the town, leaving their pursuers in the rear, and have not yet been captured.

Armed Posse Out.

A posse led by Deputy Sheriff Hudson, heavily armed, is in pursuit, but there is little chance of the prisoners being captured, because of the many dense woods which offer them a place of shelter. The escape caused the greatest excitement throughout the county, and in addition to the sheriff's posse, farmers and others have joined in the search, as it is feared that in their wild desire to get away they may resort to crime.

The jail delivery was accomplished in the absence of Sheriff West and Deputy Sheriff Hudson, both of whom had left town on business. The only person on guard at the time was Jailor Timothy West, who had observed nothing that would lead him to suspect that the prisoners were contemplating an escape, although it is now known that they had been planning to escape for more than two weeks.

To avoid the attention that would be attracted by their chiseling of the wall, the prisoners had been continually singing during the afternoons and evenings for two weeks.

It had been remarked by some of the townspeople that the prisoners were up to some mischief, and their escape explains their joviality.

One of the escaped men is Bill Turpin, indicted for murder at Laurel. The others are Sam Brooks, George Steward, Tom Quales and Frank Kirby. All are colored.

Prevents Wholesale Delivery.

At the point of a revolver Jailor West forced Kirby to surrender after he was injured as the result of his jump. It is believed the chisel was smuggled in to the prisoners by visitors who had called some time ago.

Several other prisoners, including two awaiting trial for murder, were prevented from escaping by Jailor West, who leveled a revolver at them and threatened to kill the first man who attempted to squeeze through the opening in the wall. This was the means of taking the nerve out of the desperate prisoners, who were then shackled and placed in a steel cell.

HEAT WAVE 2100 FEET DEEP

Aeronaut Finds Out by Sailing Through It in a Balloon.

Andover, Mass., July 11.—The heat wave under which New England sweltered was 2100 feet deep, according to an interesting discovery made by Charles J. Glidden, of Boston. Mr. Glidden had gone up from Lowell.

The thermometer stood at 90 degrees all the way from earth up to 2100 feet. Here there was a sudden change and the mercury fell to 70 degrees, and a comfortable east wind was blowing.

Kissing Bug Bites Fight Fan's Throat

Waterbury, Conn., July 11.—The Jeffries-Johnson fight has brought back to Edward Scoville, of Plymouth, He sat in a cozy big tree awaiting news of the fight, and with him was his fiancée, Miss Ruth Benson, of Waterbury. A kissing bug deposited its poison on Scoville's throat, and now his jaw is so swollen that he cannot open his mouth, eating is impossible and breathing dangerous. He has to be fed by a rubber tube with liquids and is threatened with lockjaw.

TOURING AMERICA.

Gaekwar of Baroda inspects a Modern Country.

GENUINE GAEKWAR GRACES NEW YORK

Progressive Ruler of a Principality in India.

New York, July 11.—A gaekwar is in town, and a gaekwar is something so unusual that even in New York he is noticed.

Gracing the parlors of his hotel and perhaps to be seen eyeing the metropolitan throngs from the depths of their taxicabs were the royal family and suit of a semi-independent principality in British India, the progressive Maharaja Gaekwar of Baroda, his wife, the maharanee, the Princess Indra Raj; his son, Prince Jaisinh, a junior at Harvard; besides maids, secretaries and attendants. The visiting royalties will be in New York until Wednesday, when they will leave for England on the Mauretania to visit the gaekwar's two other sons, one in Oxford and another in a preparatory school at Eastbourne.

The Barodans of the accompanying party were all small, swarthy people, appearing at first glance to be a group of fashionable and cultured gypsies.

The gaekwar, they explained, is circling the globe for ideas that may be of use in uplifting his people. Last March he started out, and at first did China and Japan. He said himself of the Oriental part of the trip:

"Japan is head of India, both in common schools and in high schools. The Japanese, for one thing, don't have the caste system to fight. The system has stood as a stone wall that I have butted my head against many times in trying to enlighten my people. But I have founded 3000 schools, nevertheless."

MOSQUITOES KILL CATTLE

Pests Stop Church Services and Halt Business in Louisiana.

New Orleans, La., July 11.—The people in southwest Louisiana are going armed day and night against the hordes of mosquitoes that have been breeding in countless millions during the days of incessant rains.

At Bruix Bridge, Lake Arthur, St. Martinville, Lake Charles and other towns men, women and children carry burning bushes in efforts to ward off the pests. It is necessary to smoke out stores, offices and banks before the day's work can begin.

Milk wagons travel the streets with home made smoke producers. These consist of charcoal furnaces, and over the coals are laid dried leaves. Many of the towns are wrapped in a haze of smoke.

In the marsh country of Cameron and Calcasieu parishes it is estimated that more than 5000 head of live stock have been killed as a result of mosquito bites. All lowlands in southwest Louisiana are flooded, and these breeding places turn out new crops of mosquitoes every hour.

Business is practically at a standstill throughout St. Martin, Iberia and La Fourche parishes.

New Treatment Cures Woman.

Durham, N. C., July 11.—By a system of injections into the blood, Mrs. R. M. Baxley, of Hillsboro, is reported cured of the most aggravated case of pellagra that had come under the observation of medical men in this state. The treatment used with such success, medical men believe, proves that pellagra is a disease of the blood rather than the consequence of a corn diet.

Bought Skunk For Groundhog.

Shamokin, Pa., July 11.—After his customers fled, Michael Rebar, a restaurant keeper, learned that a farmer had sold him a skunk for a groundhog. The farmer escaped. Rebar has called off his big Sunday dinner.

WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

Grew a Full Growth of Hair on a Bald Head

Here's the Proof

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin, until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly, until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is now fairly covered with hair and it keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

LAND MEASURING DEVICE.

If Well Made It Will Be Found Very Useful on the Farm.

To measure fields readily the handy device shown herewith will be found very useful. It consists of a heavy wire or light iron rod sixteen and a half feet long, bent into a circle and the ends welded together.

Across the circle at right angles to each other are two pieces of light wood five and a half feet long. Through the center of these a hole is bored and a double handle slightly longer than half the diameter is attached.

FOR MEASURING LAND.
[From the Orange Judd Farmer.]

tached as shown by means of a bolt and nutted outside the rim of the circle. All that is necessary then is to mark one of the crosspieces and start measuring with this point on the ground.

The number of revolutions multiplied by sixteen and one-half will give the distance in rods across the field. Each quarter revolution, therefore, measures a quarter of a rod.

It is necessary in keeping this measure that the circle be not bent, because this would give inaccurate measure. It is therefore advisable to use iron heavy enough to stand ordinary knocks.—Orange Judd Farmer.

THE STOMACH.

Its Power to Resist Its Own Gastric Juices is a Puzzle.

One of the greatest questions disturbing the minds of physiologists both past and present is that of the stomach's digesting powers. It is asked why the stomach does not digest itself. It is well known that gastric juices have the power to digest the tissue of which the stomach is made. One of the things actually manufactured by the body, secreted in the glands near the stomach and poured into it, is hydrochloric acid, a powerful agent that will eat up almost anything. Why it does not eat the stomach up is problematical.

It is known that a stomach from a dead animal or man can be digested by a living man. It has been found out also that when a man is killed accidentally and his stomach is in the process of digesting, if the body be kept warm, his whole stomach will be digested and possibly, too, adjacent organs, as liver, pancreas, etc. From this it was argued that the "principle of life" kept the process from going on in a living being. Subsequently, however, this was proved to be untrue.

A living frog was put in an unconscious condition and his leg inserted through a small hole in a dog's stomach, the dog being alive and well. It was found that the frog's leg was wholly digested in the process, although living. So the last reason conceivable was proved incapable of explaining the phenomenon.

About the only conclusion left is that the stomach does gradually actually eat itself up, but that it is being constantly rebuilt. However, as this experiment is hard to perform and as no results have so far been announced in this direction, we are left in a state of absolute ignorance, and all we can do is to be devoutly thankful to Providence that our stomachs do not digest themselves except in the ordinary course of human events.—Lawrence Hedges to New York Tribune.

TALL OATS

We notice a great deal of boasting of tall oats, but can this be beaten. Squire Hammers passed through a field of oats on his mother's farm July 4, pulled up a stalk of oats every 25 steps, at the side of the field he had 8 stalks in his hand, each stalk measured 63 inches and averaged 100 grains of oats. We say to the money men of Adams if a farm will produce such stalks without lime and manure, it would, if improved, produce oats 8 feet high, and the widow has offered this farm for the last three years at $35 per acre, soil better than hundreds of gardens. Come and see the place, will sell at once.

FLIES OVER SEA TO PLEASE CROWD

Curtiss Made Dangerous Flight at Atlantic City.

ALTITUDE RECORD BROKEN

Brookins Tells of Sensation Experienced in Thrilling Flight 6175 Feet Over the Ocean.

Atlantic City, July 11.—Despite the protests of Aero club officials, who advised against a flight over the white caps, too rough to even allow a life-boat to stay off shore, Glenn Curtiss made an exhibition flight to sea rather than disappoint the big crowd who had stood patiently along the boardwalk and on the beach for hours in hopes of getting a peep at an airship in action.

The flight lasted but five minutes, but was a lively exhibition of successful flying, the squally breeze tipping the plane dangerously as Curtiss described circles over the breakers. The crowd cheered the plucky exhibition.

Walter Brookins, hero of the 6175 foot flight into the air, made no attempt to go upward, having received by wire from the Wright brothers a refusal to allow their machine to go into the air on Sunday.

Brookins has arranged a spectacular flight, with Frank Coffyn and himself together in the big Wright plane. Coffyn will probably drive on the trip, during which the two expect to make the entire circuit of the city. Brookins is still the hero of the resort, and thousands waited for hours to get a glimpse of the plucky youngster who made the new altitude record of 6175 feet.

Brookins had entirely recovered and smiled over his thrilling experience when his engine stopped nearly 6000 feet in the air. "I feel fine," he said. "Of course, the strain on my nerves was terrific, but I was all right after a few hours' sleep. When I landed I had a splitting headache from the rush through the air, as I came down without power, but I never felt any real fear until I was forced to make my last sharp turn at high speed to prevent my machine dashing me into the ocean. If my supply of gasoline had held out I firmly believe I could have added several hundred feet to the record of which I am proud."

"My greatest fear during the trip was that I would not be able to swing far enough out to sea to allow the engineers to get my measurements after my gasoline gave out. I realized when I heard my cylinders begin to pound that I had only a few seconds to stay at the altitude which I had reached, and I simply swung out on the level until I was sure that I had crossed the measuring line and then got back to earth the best way I could. The machine behaved splendidly, both on the long climb and while I was tearing down through the air at a speed that must have reached close to 100 miles an hour at the swiftest point."

Brookins declared that in spite of the heavy sweater coat and gloves which he wore he was nearly frozen during his stay above 4000 feet.

"People thought me crazy when they saw me bundled up, but I needed every bit of clothing before I came down," he said.

FISHERMAN MURDERED

Italian Shot to Death Near Somerville, N. J., by Unknown Assassin.

Somerville, N. J., July 11.—Sitting in a natural position on the stump of an old tree on the banks of the Raritan canal, with a fishing rod in his hands, Joseph Trovati, of Raritan, was found murdered by an unknown assassin, who had approached him from behind and, placing a revolver close to the back of his head, fired two shots, that must have killed him instantly. His body, which was supported by a sapling, had scarcely shifted its position, and the fishing rod was still held by a death grip in his hands.

The murdered man, sitting in this position, had been passed by several rowboats, the occupants of which believed that he was still fishing or had fallen asleep. It was not until two farm hands passed him on the canal bank, and on falling to get any response when they asked him what luck he was having, made an investigation.

The officials have been unable to obtain any clue to the identity of the murderer.

Eloping Preacher Arrested.

Kansas City, Mo., July 11.—Clinton Dewitt Sharpe, the Schenectady, N. Y., preacher, who disappeared early in June with Eunice Graham Whitager, a fourteen-year-old member of his flock, was arrested here. The young woman was also taken into custody. Sharpe has a wife in Schenectady.

Aviator Plunges to Earth; Dying.

Brussels, July 11.—Kinert, the well known Belgian aviator, fell to the ground from a great height while flying in a Farnum biplane. He was terribly injured, and there is no hope for his recovery. The machine was smashed into fragments.

If a measure which was introduced in the recent session of the New York legislature eventually becomes a law commission merchants of that state will have to put up a bond of $5,000 each as a guarantee of square dealing with customers over the state who may have no assurance of their integrity beyond claims made in newspaper advertisements or seductive circulars. Should the law pass it will mean that

DUKE NEARLY DROWNED

Fitted Englishman Had Narrow Escape When Hydroplane Capsized.

London, July 11.—The Duke of Westminster narrowly escaped drowning through the capsizing of a hydroplane in which he and three others were practicing off Cowes, Isle of Wight. The hydroplane was built especially to take part in the international races in America in August. It is forty feet long and is capable of making thirty-five knots an hour.

The accident occurred three-quarters of a mile from shore in deep water. The duke was steering and attempted to turn too sharply. The hydroplane keeled over, taking water over her stern until she capsized. The duke sank twice. Then Mr. Robins, his companion, grabbed him and held him up until a motor boat arrived and took them aboard. The two engineers clung to the hydroplane until they were rescued.

[The hydroplane draws only an inch or two of water and is built to skim over the surface of the water instead of cutting through it like a motor boat.]

SEWER SWEEPS BOY 2000 FEET IN JIFFY

He Falls Into Swift Currents at Play.

Lehighton, Pa., July 11.—While twelve-year-old Ralph Snyder, of this place, was playing with companions at the iron street entrance to the Opera House, he slipped and fell into the gutter, through which a powerful current of water was passing at great speed.

He was carried away with the swiftness of an arrow; but his playmates thought it only a huge joke until they saw him plunge feet first, into the open culvert leading to the big sewer. Then they became excited and spread an alarm, and very soon several hundred people ran to his rescue. Some began to tear the coverings from the sewer; but others ran to the point where the stream empties into the Lehigh river.

The boy, however, was sidetracked in a branch pipe at the Carbon Transit company's power house, where he landed safe, but saturated.

While the crowd searched frantically for his body at the end of the sewer, Ralph hailed them in hoarse glee from the railroad bank. All were amazed and attributed his escape to a kind providence.

The current carried him over 2000 feet through the sewer, and its force was very powerful.

LIGHTNING KILLS COWS

Electrical Storm Did Much Damage at Caldwell, N. J.

Caldwell, N. J., July 11.—A fierce electrical storm passed over Caldwell, doing much damage.

A lightning bolt struck a house on Bloomfield avenue belonging to Supervisor Fred Baldwin. The roof was burned off before the fire department could arrive. Another bolt struck the $30,000 home of John Crawford Burns, on Rosalind avenue, at Essex Falls. At least $5000 damage was done at Clinton, four miles west of Caldwell. Lightning struck a tree under which some cattle had taken shelter. Four cows were killed.

Regrets Paying Fine With Pennies.

Sharon, Pa., July 11.—Daniel Lee, proprietor of a barber shop, was fined $10 for a minor offense, and displayed his resentment by paying the fine with 1000 pennies. As he dumped them on the desk the justice reminded him that so many pennies was not legal tender and ordered Lee to roll them in packages of twenty-five. It took the barber about two hours in a hot, stuffy courtroom to comply with the court's decree.

Heat Drives Girl to Kill Herself.

York, Pa., July 11.—To the intensity of the heat wave is ascribed the death of Miss May Hollis, who committed suicide by shooting three bullets through her head. Physicians assert that the heat was responsible for the act.

to start in the commission or jobbing business or continue in it a typewriter, a batch of cheap stationery and a few bunches of penny stamped envelopes will no longer suffice. This law will put the shark and shyster out of business. To cure these commission swindlers, which are country wide, a federal law of similar character should be enacted.

BOY BANDITS SHOOT OFFICER

Held Up Pittsburg Street Car in Wild West Style.

TWO SUSPECTS ARRESTED

Wearing Masks, Youthful Robbers Held Up Car and Fired on Officer When He Attempted to Draw a Revolver.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 11.—Three boys, none of whom has reached the age of seventeen years, at 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning held up a street car in the real Jesse James story book fashion and fatally shot a police lieutenant who was a passenger on his way home.

Two of the youthful bandits were captured and confessed to their complicity in the crime, but blamed their missing companion for the shooting of the police officer.

Conductor Charles Lenner and Motorman Robert Bowman were making their last trip on a Mount Washington car. They had the usual last chance load of Saturday night travelers. On Wabash avenue, in the outskirts of the city, three masked men boarded the car, ordering every passenger to "deliver."

The delivering began in real earnest, there being a fine collection of pants buttons and miscellaneous coins on the floor, when Lieutenant Schriver Stewart, who was in citizen's clothing, pulled his revolver. One of the bandits was quicker, and Stewart went to the car floor with a bullet through his groin. After falling he fired five shots at the fleeing bandits, not one of which apparently took effect. Stewart was removed to the South Side hospital and reports from there say he cannot live.

After the hold-up the police drag net was put out and two of the boys were found peacefully sleeping in the Yoder hotel, one of the cheap Pittsburg lodging houses.

HELEN GOULD'S HEIRS

She Will Leave Millions to Brother Frank's Daughters.

New York, July 11.—At a conference of the members of the Gould family, when it was known by the family that Frank J. Gould would wed Edith Kelly, the actress, and that Mrs. Gould would marry Ralph Hill Thomas, it was decided that Miss Helen Gould should have full charge of the two daughters, of the couple, Helen and Margaret.

The children of this unfortunate union, it is announced, will not only be reared by Miss Helen Gould, but they will receive the greater part of her great fortune. They are at present at her country home in Tarrytown, and will remain with Miss Gould permanently.

Mr. Gould has not been with his children in the current six months. Because of the further stipulation that neither parent could take the children more than 100 miles from New York without the written consent of the other, Mr. Gould had the children sent for his term of custody to his sister, Miss Helen Gould.

Efforts have been made by counsel to the mother to gain sole and absolute custody of the children for her.

It is not doubted that these children, hitherto without a constant home, will become heirs to Miss Helen's millions. Each of Jay Gould's heirs received a sixth of $90,000,000. Helen, George and also Frank have increased their inheritance considerably.

WHITE FRIGHT KILLS NEGRO

Practical Joke Too Much For Winner on Johnson-Jeffries Fight.

Omaha, Neb., July 11.—While a coroner's jury has determined that Tom Green, a negro porter in a barber shop, was scared to death, it remains a fact that his death was indirectly due to the victory of Johnson over Jeffries. Green had bet all his money on Johnson and had mortgaged his salary for weeks to come.

Having won, he collected his bets and celebrated. In the evening, being considerably intoxicated, Green sat in a barber chair and was soon sound asleep.

When the hour for closing arrived two of the barbers concluded to play a joke upon Green. They powdered his face and wool until they were as white as snow and then threw a white sheet over him.

When Green awoke and looked in a glass he shrieked in terror: "Good Lord, I was always black. Now I am white. It is not me. I am dead, and this is my ghost!" He fell back in the chair and expired.

Scalded In Beer Vat.

Seranton, Pa., July 11.—Adolph Heidenreder, brewer at the plant of the Standard Brewing company, fell asleep while sitting beside one of the huge vats of boiling hot beer. He lost his balance and fell into the beer, and before he could be rescued by other employees who heard his screams of agony had been badly scalded about the chest, neck, back and arms. He may die.

What a Farmer Must Know.

To be a farmer of the present time one must be learned in chemistry, a good carpenter, a fair machinist, an ordinary house painter, an accurate bookkeeper, a good veterinary surgeon, a competent civil engineer, know enough about law to keep out of court, be a shrewd buyer, an affable salesman and a good citizen.—Farm Press.

TAKING THE WHOLE COUNTRY BY STORM

The new remedy is a recent discovery, but it is taking the whole country by storm. It has cured so many people throughout the state within the past few months that scores of newspapers are publishing local testimonials, giving names, streets and numbers of many people whose word cannot be doubted. The remedy certainly must have remarkable merit as so many people after using it a short while are advising their sick friends to try it. The Greensburg, Indiana, Daily Review recently published the following: Mr. J. W. Boyle, of 116 East Washington street, said: "My wife has been taking Root Juice and it has done wonders for her. Before taking it she had a very bad stomach. The lightest food would sour on her stomach and cause it to burn and pain her very much. In fact, she said felt like it was raw from top to bottom. Recently her trouble was aggravated by an attack of la grippe. Her appetite was very poor, but after taking the Root Juice a few days she had a good appetite and could digest everything she ate without the least pain or inconvenience. She is no longer weak and nervous, and seems like a new woman. The remedy has proved a wonderful blessing to her." In fact, so many people are talking about its great soothing, healing and toning qualities to the stomach, bowels, liver and kidneys that it is now hard for the Root Juice people to make it fast enough to fill all orders. It is retailed for one dollar a bottle. Many local people have testified to its wonderful merits, as anyone can learn by going to the People's drug store.

You can save from $1 to $2 on the gallon if you want to in buying the varnish for your new house, but you will have nothing to be proud of in the appearance of your floors, doors, or other varnished surfaces after the first year's service.

What the Cows Drink.

At the Geneva (N. Y.) experiment station it was found that Jersey cows drink the most, 5.25 pounds of water to one pound of milk produced; the Guernseys came next, the Shorthorns, Devons, Holsteins and Ayrshires after them in diminishing order. Milking cows will drink 50 per cent more water than dry ones.

The Abuse of the Currycomb.

Much has been said regarding the use and very little about the abuse of the currycomb. Some horses should never have a currycomb put on them. A fair sized currycomb in some cases will be found vastly superior. In winter horses not at work are in no way benefited by currying.

HER SURPRISE.

By THOMAS R. DEAN.
 (Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

There is no place wherein men—and women, too—will sooner sink to the brute level than in a lumber camp.

Miss Margaret Storms of St. Louis was the daughter of an owner of lumber property in Wisconsin. She was city born and bred and had never been in a wild country in her life. But one winter she took it into her head to go with her father to his lumber property, and, although he told her that the people were very rough and she would not like to be among them, she was possessed with a desire to go, and she did.

From the moment of her arrival she seemed to delight in the wild woods and showed no disinclination for the rude lumber folk she met there. She was eager to go about and in order to be able to travel on the surface of the snow asked for some one to teach her to walk in snowshoes. A guide named Jim Hogan, a tall, strapping son of the woods, was recommended to her as an expert snowshoe and skie teacher. Jim had physical beauty enough to captivate a dozen women. He had a profusion of curly black hair, large brown eyes, an oval face, shaved except for a drooping mustache, and the figure of an Apollo Belvedere. He was perfectly fearless and thoroughly versed in woodcraft.

But here the guide's qualifications as a lady killer ceased. He could read and write, but if he had ever read anything he had no ability to impart it to others. He had little fancy for women and was rather annoyed at their attentions. Indeed, he kept himself as much as possible away from the settlements to avoid them.

Strange as it may appear, Miss Storms, who had been educated in the best schools, came under the spell of this ignorant woodsman. But it should not appear so improbable when we remember that the early kings of England could neither read nor write. True, their queens were just as ignorant, but there is ample evidence that they loved their husbands. At any rate, the lumber capitalist's daughter, skimming over the snow with her teacher, became bewitched. Possibly she possessed an emotional nature. Possibly her fancy was fired by seeing his graceful figure threading its way before her through the interminable woods. Be the cause what it may, she came to feel that life would be a wretched existence without her Hogan.

It happened that the daughter of the storekeeper of the camp found more favor in Hogan's eyes than Miss Storms. This girl, Anna Woodson, was also a city girl, but not of the class of Miss Storms. Perhaps the fact that she was nearer Hogan's level gave her his preference. He had become aware that Miss Storms was infatuated with him and that Miss Woodson really loved him. He did not break with either, fearing trouble with her he discarded. He disliked especially to break with Miss Storms, for her father was paying him a handsome sum each week for his daughter's instruction.

One day Miss Storms was driving in her father's buggy when she overtook Jim Hogan and Miss Woodson walking side by side. Influenced by a sudden impulse, induced by jealousy, Miss Storms as she passed the couple gave her rival a cut with her whip, leaving a red welt on her cheek.

There was no opportunity to resent the insult then and there, for in a moment Miss Storms was beyond reach. Miss Woodson burned for an opportunity to get her fingers in Miss Storms' hair and so expressed herself to Mr. Hogan. Terrified at being the cause of a fracas between the two women, he told her that if she attacked her rival he would leave the camp and neither girl would hear from him again.

Miss Woodson, fearing that he would keep his word, yet not being able to restrain her thirst for revenge, chose a middle course. She secretly sent a challenge to Miss Storms to fight a duel. The feelings that induced this city girl who had been carefully reared to fight a duel with another girl in a lumber camp cannot be analyzed. Was it the influence of the wild ways among which she had fallen? Was it hate for her rival? Was it a return to the brute instincts which some scientists aver were once common with us all? Whatever the motives, the challenge was accepted.

Unfortunately seconds were necessary. Indeed, some one was needed to bear the challenge. The bearer told her most intimate friend, who in turn told her most intimate friend. This included two intimate friends, besides the principals, who knew of the affair. But as each intimate friend had one or more intimate friends within a few hours after the challenge had passed the coming duel was known of all over the camp.

Hogan fled.

One of Mr. Storms' managing men informed him of the situation, and when the next train left Miss Storms was on it.

A few years later Miss Storms married a professor of Greek literature in one of the universities. She took a fancy to go on her wedding trip to her father's lumber camp. While there she bribed a lumberman to walk the man for whom she had been willing to unsex herself and risk her life past the cabin occupied by herself and her husband. Hogan walked by with the lumberman, and the professor's wife observed him from behind a curtain.

"Oh, heavens!" she exclaimed. "How could I have done it?"

Carrots For Cattle.

Those who have one or two cows and a piece of ground that may be tilled should not fail to sow a few rows of half long carrot seed. If sown by hand the seed should be scattered so as to make a row of a couple of inches broad. They may be sown fifteen to sixteen inches apart. Keep them clean, but do not thin them when the seed has been prudently sown. When autumn comes the amount of good food furnished will be a matter of surprise. Until freezing weather

His Secret

By NATHAN HARDY
 Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

When I was at the university the set of students to which I belonged contained Oscar Poland—at least Poland was at one time a member of our group—but as time wore on he was gradually dropped by all except Alan Wells and myself. This was on account of the principles, or lack of principles, he advocated. For instance, he asserted that the Spartan code—that the criminality attached to stealing was in getting caught—would apply in most cases today. He declared that he would rob any one if he could do so without being detected.

When Poland gave us such ideas as this at first we laughed at him, telling him that he didn't believe what he said. But pessimists are never popular, and one by one his friends dropped away from him. As I have said, Wells and I stuck to him, feeling all the while that his pessimism was but skin deep. The only way we could see he proved his theory of general selfishness was by declining to spend his money as we spent ours. When we asked him what he did with his surplus change he said that he was keeping it for his own use. "You fellows," he would say, "don't spend money on each other because you wish to, but because you are afraid of being considered mean if you don't. Ergo, you are mean. Nevertheless I will admit that there may be some generosity in your case, for you do spend your money, while I, who do not spend mine, show myself to be absolutely mean and selfish."

This would start anew arguments that had already been worn threadbare, and at the end of every argument Poland would lose another friend.

"What do you think of a man," said one of our set to me one day, "who admits that he would rob or steal provided he was sure of not being caught?"

"In the case of a common thief who practiced what he preached," I replied. "I would think him an element of society should be so far as possible eliminated. In the case of Oscar Poland I should consider that I did not understand him."

"Not understand him? Well, I like that. The more fool you if you should leave funds within his grasp that he could take without being detected. I tell you the man who declares such ideas shows that he has been born blind to principle the same as another has been born blind to colors. Take my word for it, if Oscar Poland ever finds an opportunity to make himself rich at another's expense he'll do it."

"They say business is but legalized robbery."

"My opinion of you is that you're tainted with these fallacies yourself."

And so it was that some of our associates came to show some coolness to Wells and me, who defended Poland. Alan and I were talking the matter over one day, and Alan remarked that he wondered what Oscar did with his money. There was certainly no evidence of his hoarding it, and, as to spending it, he was considered too mean to offer a friend a cigar. That same evening we were walking along one of the principal streets of the town when suddenly Poland appeared ahead of us.

"Let's shadow him," said Alan. "We may find out something."

"If I thought for a moment we should discover something that would compromise him I would decline. As it is I'm with you."

So we lagged behind just far enough to keep Oscar in sight, now and again dodging behind a pair of steps or a tree to keep him from observing us. Presently we saw him go into a dry goods store. When he left the store he carried a bundle under his arm. He kept on in his course, as following his next stop was at a drug store.

"Going to buy asafetida and take a dose now and then when no one sees him," Alan remarked.

One more stop and we had seen all of our quarry's purchases. He entered a toy store.

"I have it," exclaimed Alan. "He's married and running a family without the faculty knowing it."

"Perhaps you're right," I replied. "The chase is getting interesting."

Oscar left the toy store with more bundles and, turning off the main shopping street, pursued one that led into a mean portion of the town.

"I hope," said Alan, "he isn't bringing up his children in this location."

Presently Oscar stopped at the door of a little cottage that was rotting away. It was opened for him, and he went inside.

"Our game's blocked," I said. "Wait till he goes away."

So we waited half an hour, when Oscar left the house and strolled unceremoniously down the street. He had no sooner gone beyond recall than we knocked at the door from which he had emerged. A pale woman opened it.

"We're looking for Oscar Poland," said Alan, entering without an invitation.

Well, it was all out. Several little children (one of them ill) were there. Another was trying on some new clothing, and by the sick one on a table stood a bottle of medicine.

We stayed long enough to discover that this was one of several poor families Oscar was caring for, then went away, ashamed into a small gift of our own.

But we never told him or any one else we had his secret.

Alfalfa is Excellent Feed.

Alfalfa is an excellent feeding stuff where it can be obtained. Hogs relish it either when green or when it has been properly cured for hay. It is very helpful if the woad sow has access to pasture. It not only helps provide the proper food, but it affords a place for exercise which is very essential.

Farm and Garden

FARMS EAST AND WEST.

Comparative Cost of Lands in the Two Sections Discussed.

In a letter to the New York Times a correspondent wrote recently:

"If the Times really wants to know why it is that western land—in Iowa or Illinois—sells for $100 to $200 an acre while plenty of farms can be bought in New York for $10 to $20 an acre, let it pay attention. The secret is about to be released. And let me say at the outset that with considerable familiarity with both west and east I'd much prefer to buy eastern to western lands."

"One point in favor of the western farm is that, whereas a western farm, properly handled, will raise crops which pay a good interest on the investment without fertilizer, a great many acres of land in the $10 and $20 belt are merely something to put productive soil on top of. The French method of carrying the land away when one moves wouldn't go bad in connection with several cheap New York farms."

"Another thing—one can take an eighty acre farm in the middle west and plow every foot of it, while there are very few cheap farms in this section which can be cut up into fields large enough to pay for using large machinery. The result is that the eastern farmer, if he is to make use of the cheap lands, must 'putter.' Now, the right sort of puttering is profitable—fruit, berry and truck raising will make moderately large fortunes for diligent and capable men—but most men don't like that sort of business. The middle westerner is a whole lot happier with a four horse gang plow and a harrow that wouldn't get between stumps in the east than he would be on a $10 an acre New York farm. And he doesn't strike as many stones in the course of a season as the New York farmer will in a day. The American farmer hasn't lost his sense of the 'bigness' of the country yet, and until he does lose it he will prefer to work the large farm rather than the small one, even if he gets no more for his labor."

"Furthermore—and this is not to be ignored—around that high priced land in the west will be found a more intelligent, better educated body of men, taking them by and large, than in a given number of eastern farmers, because the factories and the other city joys seem to lure a much larger proportion of the ambitious youth of the east. The city is so close to the farm that the transition is but a step. Of course there are many of the most intelligent farmers of the country here, but the farmer with a desire for intellectual associations—and some have it—will find less of this opportunity in the $10 and $20 localities than in the west. Intelligent farmers, like men in other professions, like intelligent companionship."

"I am firmly convinced that the best opportunities for agriculture lie within a few hundred miles of New York city, and my impression is that the best way to get the right sort of farmers to go to this land and stay there is to get a number of this kind of men interested in one locality, thus insuring immunity from death by intellectual starvation. It used to be imagined that a farmer couldn't starve in that way, but we know better now."
